1.30pm - 2.30pm

Afternoon workshops.

Interactive workshops to explore the practical delivery of new approaches in new spaces.

Workshop A

What is it like to teach in a super class?

IPACA have adopted a superclass model for team teaching groups of 90 students in one learning area. This collaborative approach has delivered outstanding results and has responded to the individual and group needs of students.

Gary Spracklen: IPACA and UK Learning Member.
Supported by Gary's colleagues from IPACA.

Workshop B

Collaboration creates improved outcomes.

Results from an international Leader whose collaborative approach in creating new spaces has delivered improved outcomes and changed the culture of learning in schools for both teachers and students.

Stephen Harris: Principal, Northern Beaches Christian School, Sydney, Australia (1100 students aged 4-18) and CEFPI Australia Member.

2.30pm

Change over

2.30pm - 3.30pm

Challenge workshop groups addressing the following issues...

- 1) Are we designing spaces and learning environments to meet current and future learning needs?
- 2) Are we acknowledging the world in which all ages of young people learn in a technological age?
- 3) Why are teachers, students and educational users not at the heart of the drive to redesign spaces for learning?
- 4) How do we demonstrate that it is possible to create excellence in new environments for learning within current legislation and budgetary constraints?

3.30pm - 4.30pm

Collective feedback from workshop group leaders and open forum discussion.

4.30pm

End

Workshop C

Creative opportunities exist within legislation and budget constraints?

A creative design process that responds to learning needs, budget constraints and legislation and continues to improve outcomes. A 'tool kit' on how to meet the challenges of new design for current learning needs in new and remodeled buildings.

Tom Lyons: GSS Architecture and UK Learning Member.

Workshop D

Good dialogue promotes effective design.

An international and national perspective on how to keep learning and professional expertise at the centre of the current approach to the design of new schools and new learning spaces.

Terry White: Director of UK Learning.

Neil Logue: Director of UK Learning.
